Presidential Candidates

There are four contenders for the Peace and Freedom Party nomination for President in this year’s primary. They are:

Why Vote Peace and Freedom Party?

Sick of Republicans attacking you? Tired of Democrats selling you out? There is an alternative—the Peace and Freedom Party.

We fight for the things all working people need: free education from preschool through university; free health care for all; full employment at union wages with paid vacation and other benefits; an end to U.S. intervention throughout the world. Workers, both documented and undocumented, have the right to live under conditions of freedom, dignity, and solidarity.

On June 5, Vote for Marsha Feinland for U.S. Senate

Senator Dianne Feinstein, the incumbent, represents the agribusinessmen, real estate developers, bankers, and insurance company CEOs who run our lives and foreclose on our future. Unite around a candidate who represents you.

Senator Marsha Feinland would fight to:
• Bring all the troops home now.
• Close down dangerous nuclear plants and abolish nuclear weapons.
• Restore and protect the

Restore Voter Choice – Overturn Proposition 14

This June your ballot will be different. Except for the Presidential primary (which hasn’t changed), you will no longer vote for candidates to represent your political party in November. Instead, you will vote on which two candidates get to run again in the fall. The party labels that appear next to the candidates’ names will have little meaning because political parties no longer control the use of their names.

But you won’t see the real change until November, when you will have only two choices. They might both be Democrats or both be Republicans. “Top two” elections relegate small party and independent candidates to June, when fewer people turn out to vote.
